THIS YEAR, WE PRESENT THE JFK WHITE HOUSE ORNAMENT

Jackie's Story
Jacqueline Kennedy commissioned Aaron Shikler in 1970 to provide the posthumous portrayal of her husband, which now serves as his official White House portrait. "I painted him with his head bowed, not because I think of him as a martyr," Shikler said, "but because I wanted to show him as a president who was a thinker ... I hoped to show a courage that made him humble."
